FROM THE NAVIGATOR

🕒 TIME CHANGE

Please be reminded that early on Thursday morning the ship's time was ADVANCED ONE HOUR. This will be repeated tomorrow and clocks will be ADVANCED ONE HOUR early on Friday morning. Please advance your watches before retiring this evening Thursday, 19 December.

NAVIGATION INFORMATION

After disembarking our pilot, we set an easterly heading passing through the safety fairway and arriving 50 nautical miles south of Nantucket Island at 4.00am. From here we will set a heading of 084 degrees passing 20 nautical miles to the south of the shallows of Georges Bank where we will continue on this heading for the remainder of the day.

SUNRISE AND SUNSET

Sunrise: 6.18am / Sunset: 7.53pm

NAUTICAL FACT OF THE DAY

A fathom is the unit of measurement traditionally used when referring to the depth of the sea or, in some cases, the length of ropes and cables. The word comes from the old English faedm, meaning to embrace, and is a measurement across the outstretched arms of a man, approximately six feet in a man of average size; the length of a nautical fathom is therefore six feet, roughly 2 metres. The term is used less and less frequently with the growing tendency for most countries today to adopt the metric system measurement as the datum shown on the nautical charts they produce.

Please be sure to enter the planetarium on the starboard side.

Commodore Bernard Warner

Commodore Bernard Warner has been at sea for forty years and in command for the past twelve years. He was born near Leeds and grew up in the North Yorkshire town of Wetherby. A lifetime friendship with the sea was cultivated at Sandsend near Whitby on the northeast coast of England, where he spent the summer holidays sailing and fishing with his father.

When just eight years old he went away to boarding school and was educated initially at Terrington Hall near York (1956 - 1961) and then at Denstone College in Staffordshire (1961 - 1964).

At sixteen he entered the Warsash School of Navigation at the University of Southampton. Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth would frequently sail past the college as they made their way up Southampton Water into the port and it was these ships which gave him the inspiration to one day command a Cunard Trans-Atlantic Liner.

In 1965 Cunard Line would only consider employing navigating officers who had attained a Master's Certificate. Commodore Warner would be twenty five years old by the time this had been achieved. The alternative was to join P&O, which was the other great passenger shipping company of the day. He signed indentures and commenced a four year cadetship with them on 1st January 1966. P&O had a large passenger fleet but an even larger fleet of cargo ships. His first voyage was from King George V dock in London to the Far East aboard "Somali", a 7000 gross ton freighter.

Nearing the end of his cadetship in 1969, he joined his first passenger ship "Oriana," and by the early seventies he was sailing as a Junior Deck Officer aboard the P&O ship "Iberia". He was later to be appointed to the legendary P&O liner "Canberra," where he also sailed as Deputy Captain in 1988.

Commodore Warner met his wife, Tina, on board Royal Princess. They were married in 1988 and now live in Leek Wootton (about one mile from Warwick Castle). Their two sons, Tom (aged 16) and Charles (aged 11), enjoy sailing aboard with them during school holidays.

In 1994, he was appointed to his first command - the 20000 gross ton ship "Island Princess" - and since that time has commanded seven other passenger ships. He oversaw the building of "Dawn Princess", "Golden Princess" and "Diamond Princess" and was designated the first Master of both "Golden Princess" and "Diamond Princess", which at a 116 000 gross tons, are slightly smaller than "Queen Mary 2" (148,528 gross tons). On November 11th 1996 he was invited by the British & Commonwealth Office to lay a wreath at the Cenotaph on behalf of the British Merchant Navy. This is an annual event to honour all those who have given their lives in both World Wars.

In 1998 he was elected a Younger Brother of Trinity House whose Master is the Duke of Edinburgh, and who have recently asked Princess Anne to be its first female member. Bernard Warner is a descendant of Sir Thomas Warner who, in the 17th Century, was Captain of the schooner "Marmaduke". Sir Thomas crossed the Atlantic in 1623, and founded the first English settlement in the West Indies at the island of St Christopher (now known as St Kitts). He claimed it on behalf of King James I of England and in 1625 became the island's first Governor General. His tomb is at St. Thomas church in Middle Island village on St Kitts.

Commodore Warner was appointed to Queen Mary 2 in the summer of 2005. He recently realized his career ambition after being promoted to Commodore which is the rank of "Senior Captain in the Fleet".
